CHAD GIESBRECHT · FILMING THE OKANAGAN SINCE 2004

150+ WEDDINGS FILMED

KELOWNA & THE OKANAGAN VALLEY, BRITISH COLUMBIA

WELCOME

A Note From Chad

Congratulations on your engagement.

I started Pixel Pro Productions in 2004, the same summer the Okanagan Mountain Park firestorm swept through this valley — the kind of thing that has a way of sharpening what's worth holding onto. That's the instinct I've brought to every wedding since: your day happens once, and my job is to make sure the version you can return to is honest, beautiful, and true to how it actually felt.

I've now filmed more than 150 weddings across the Okanagan, and I still shoot every one myself — not a rotating roster of contractors, but me, learning your day, your people, and the small moments that make it yours.

If you're also looking for a photographer, my wife Heather is a wedding photographer here in the valley, and we love working weddings together when it's the right fit.

This guide walks through how the process works, what each collection includes, and how to hold your date. If you have a question it doesn't answer, just ask — I read every message myself.

Looking forward to it,

Chad

GOOD TO KNOW

Frequently Asked

When should we book?

Popular Okanagan dates (June through September) often fill 9–12 months in advance.

Do you travel for destination weddings?

Yes — I take on two destination weddings each year.

What if it rains?

I've filmed every season the Okanagan can throw at us, and always have a plan for it.

What secures our date?

A signed agreement and retainer — the details are laid out in your proposal.

When will we receive our film?

Your teaser arrives first, with your full film to follow — timing is confirmed in your proposal.
